To the PRINTER.

THERE is a pathetic, elegant, and sententious simplicity in the writings of great and good men, singularly expressive of that sweetness, harmony, and uniformity of conduct, which accompanied them through life; and which I take to be the natural result of conscious goodness and exalted virtue. The perusal of such writings affords more pleasure than the pompous display of rhetorical flourishes, and refined elaborate periods: I was therefore highly delighted with a letter, which a neighbour of mine, a Quaker, has communicated to me, wrote by Mr. Penn to his wife and children, a little before his first voyage to America, and found after his death among some old M. S. S. never published. I have gained permission to copy it, and here send it you. The sentiments are not studied, noval, or sublime, but simple, sincere, and natural; adapted to the occasion, flowing from the heart, and consonant with the rules of the true epistolary writing. Mr. Penn, (as observed of Shakespear) appears not so properly to 'speak from nature, as that she speaks through him.' Whether we view this great man in the light of a legislator, historian, or chronologist, we must allow he had great extent of knowledge, accuracy of judgment, and quickness of invention: and I think it is but justice to his memory to observe, that in all his writings the gentleman, scholar, and christian are eminently conspicuous. He appears to have a much deeper and truer sense of religion, than was common to the genius of the times in which he lived. Your's Z. Z.

Mr. W. PENN's LETTER.

My dear Wife and Children,

MY love, that sea nor land, nor death itself can extinguish or lessen toward you, most endearedly visits you with eternal embraces, and will abide with you for ever; and may the God of my life watch over you, and bless you, and do you good in this world and for ever. Some things are upon my spirit to leave with you, in your respective capacities; as I am to one a husband, and to the rest a father, if I should never see you more in this world.

My dear wife, remember thou wast the love of my youth, and much the joy of my life; the most beloved as well as most worthy of all my earthly comforts: And the reason of that love was more thy inward, than thy outward excellencies (which yet were many.) God knows, and thou know'st it, I can say it was a match of Providence's making; and God's image in us both was the first thing, and the most amiable and engaging ornament in our eyes. Now I am to leave thee, and that without knowing whether I shall ever see thee more in this world, take my counsel into thy bosom, and let it dwell with thee in my stead while thou livest.

1st. Let the fear of the Lord, and a zeal and love to his glory, dwell richly in thy heart; and thou wilt watch for good over thyself and thy dear children and family, that no rude, light, or bad thing be committed: Else God will be offended, and he will repent himself of the good he intends thee and thine.

2dly. Be diligent in meetings of worship and business; stir up thyself and others herein; 'tis thy day and place: And let meetings be kept once a day in the family, to wait upon the Lord, who has given us much time for ourselves: And my dearest to make thy family-matters easy to thee, divide thy time, and be regular; 'tis easy and sweet: Thy retirement will afford thee to do it; so in the morning to view the business of the house, and fix it as thou desirest, seeing all be in order; that by thy counsel all may move, and to thee render an account every evening. The time for work, for walking, for meals, may be certain, at least as near as may be; and grieve not thyself with careless servants, they will disorder thee; rather pay them, and let them go, if they will not be better by admonitions: This is best, to avoid many words, which I know wound the soul and offend the Lord.

3dly. Cast up thy income, and see what it daily amounts to; by which thou may'st be sure to have it in thy sight and power to keep within compass: And I beseech thee to live low and sparingly, till my debts are paid; and then enlarge as thou seest it convenient. Remember thy mother's example, when thy father's public-spiritedness had worsted his estate (which is my case.) I know thou lovest plain things, and are averse to the pomp of the world; a nobility natural to thee. I write not as doubtful, but to quicken thee, for my sake, to be more vigilant herein; knowing that God will bless thy care, and thy poor children and thee for it. My mind is wrapt up in a saying of thy father's, 'I desire not riches, but to owe nothing;' and truly that is wealth; and more than enough to live, is a snare attended with many sorrows. I need not bid thee be humble, for thou art so; nor meek and patient, for it is much of thy natural disposition: but I pray thee, be oft in retirement with the Lord, and guard against encroaching friendships. Keep them at arms end: For it is giving away our power, aye, and self too, into the possession of another; and that which might seem engaging in the beginning, may prove a yoke and burthen too hard and heavy in the end. Wherefore, keep dominion over thyself, and let thy children, good meetings, and friends be the pleasure of thy life.

4thly. And now, my dearest, let me recommend to thy care my dear children; abundantly beloved of me as the Lord's blessings, and the sweet pledges of our mutual and endeared affection. Above all things, endeavour to breed them up in the love of virtue, and that wholly plain way of it which we have lived in, that the world, in no part of it, get into my family. I had rather they were homely than finely bred, as to outward behaviour; yet I love sweetness mixed with gravity, and chearfulness tempered with sobriety. Religion in the heart leads into this true civility, teaching men and women to be mild and courteous in their behaviour; an accomplishment worthy indeed of praise.

5thly. Next breed them up in a love of one another; tell them, 'tis the charge I left behind me; and that 'tis the way to have the love and blessing of God upon them: Also what his portion is who hates, or calls his brother fool. Sometimes separate them, but not long; and allow them to send and give each other small things, to endear one another with. Once more, I say, tell them it was my counsel, they should be tender and affectionate one to another. For their learning be liberal; spare no cost; for by such parsimony all is lost that is saved; but let it be useful knowledge, such as is consistent with truth and godliness, not cherishing a vain conversation or idle mind, but ingenuity mixed with industry is good for the body and mind too. I recommend the useful parts of mathematics, as building houses or ships, measuring, surveying, dialling, navigation, &c. but agriculture is especially in my eye: Let my children be husbandmen and housewives; 'tis industrious, healthy, honest, and of good example: Like Abraham, and the holy antients, who pleased God and obtained a good report. This leads you to consider the works of God and nature, of things that are good, and diverts the mind from being taken up with the vain arts and inventions of a luxurious world. 'Tis commendable in the princes of Germany, and nobles of that empire, that they have all their children instructed in some useful occupation. Rather keep an ingenious person in the house to teach them, than send them to schools; too many evil impressions being commonly received there. Be sure to observe their genius, and don't cross it as to learning: Let them not dwell too long on one thing, but let their change be agreeable, and all their diversions have some little bodily labour in them. When grown big, have most care for them; for then there are more snares both within and without. When marriageable, see that they have worthy persons in their eye, of good life, and good fame for piety and understanding, I need no wealth but sufficiency: And be sure their love be dear, fervent, and mutual, that it may be happy for them. I chuse not they should be married into earthly covetous kindred; and of cities and towns of concourse beware; the world is apt to stick close to those who have lived and got wealth there: A country life and estate I like best for my children. I prefer a decent mansion of an hundred pounds per annum, before ten thousand pounds in London, or such like place, in a way of trade. In fine, my dear, endeavour to breed them dutiful to the Lord, and his blessed light, truth, and grace in their hearts, who is their Creator; and his fear will grow up with them. Teach a child (says the wise man) the way thou wilt have him to walk, and when he is old he will not forget it. Next, obedience to thee their dear mother; and that not for wrath, but for conscience sake: Liberal to the poor, pitiful to the miserable, humble and kind to all: And may my God make thee a blessing, and give the comfort in our dear children; and in age, gather thee to the joy and blessedness of the just (where no death shall separate us) for ever.

And now, my dear children, that are the gifts and mercies of the God of your tender father; hear my counsel, and lay it up in your hearts; love it more than treasure, and follow it, and you shall be blessed here and happy hereafter.---In the first place, remember your Creator in the days of your youth. It was the glory of Israel in the 2d of Jeremiah, and how did God bless Josiah because he feared him in his youth: And so he did Jacob, Joseph, and Moses. O! my dear children, remember, and fear, and serve him who made you, and gave you to me and your dear mother: That you may live to him, and glory him, in your generations. To do this, in your youthful days seek after the Lord, that you may find him; remembering his great love in creating you; that you are not beasts, plants, or stones: But that he has kept you, and given you his grace within, and substance without, and provided plentifully for you. This remember in your youth, that you may be kept from the evil of the world: For, in age, it will be harder to overcome the temptations of it. Wherefore, my dear children, eschew the appearance of evil, and love and cleave to that in your hearts, that shews you evil from good, and tells you when you do amiss, and reproves you for it. It is the light of Christ, that he has given you for your salvation: If you do this, and follow my counsel, God will bless you in this world, and give you an inheritance in that, which shall never have an end. For the light of Jesus is of a purifying nature; it seasons those who love it, and take heed to it; and never leaves such, till it has brought them to the city of God, that has foundations. O! that ye may be seasoned with the gracious nature of it; hide it in your hearts, and flee, my dear children, from all youthful lusts; the vain sports, pastimes and pleasures of the world; redeeming the time, because the days are evil. You are now beginning to live---what would some give for your time? Oh, I could have lived better, were I as you, in the flower of youth.---Therefore, love and fear the Lord, keep close to meetings; and delight to wait upon the Lord God of your father and mother, among his despised people, as we have done; and count it your honour to be members of that society, and heirs of that living fellowship, which is enjoyed among them---for the experience of which your father's soul blesseth the Lord for ever.

Next be obedient to your dear mother, a woman whose virtue and good name, is an honour to you; for she has been exceeded by none in her time for plainness, integrity, industry, humility, virtue, and good understanding: qualities not usual among women of her worldly condition and quality. Therefore honour and obey her, my dear children, as your mother and your father's love and delight: nay, love her too, for she loved your father with a deep and upright love; chusing him before all her many suiters: and though she be of a delicate constitution and noble spirit, yet she descended to the utmost tenderness and care for you; performing the painfulest acts of service to you in your infancy, as a mother and a nurse too. I charge you before the Lord, honour and obey, love and cherish your dear mother.

Next betake yourselves to some honest, industrious course of life; and that not of sordid covetousness, but for example, and to avoid idleness. And, if you change your condition and marry, chuse with the knowledge and consent of your mother, if living, guardians, or those that have the charge of you,---mind neither beauty nor riches, but the fear of the Lord, and a sweet and amiable disposition; such as you can love above all this world: and that may make your habitations pleasant and desirable to you. And being married, be tender, affectionate, and patient, and meek. Live in the fear of the Lord, and he will bless you and your offspring. Be sure to live within compass; borrow not, neither be beholden to any:---ruin not yourselves by kindness to others, for that exceeds the due bounds of friendship: neither will a true friend expect it. Small matters I heed not. Let your industry and parsimony go no farther than for a sufficiency for life; and to make a provision for your children (and that in moderation, if the Lord gives you any) I charge you to help the poor and needy: let the Lord have a voluntary share of your income, for the good of the poor, both in our society and others: for we are all his creatures, remembring that "he that "giveth to the poor, lendeth to the Lord." Know well your in-comings that your out-goings may be the better regulate. Love not money, nor the world, use them only and they will serve you; but if you love them, you serve them:---which will debase your spirits as well as offend the Lord. Pity the distressed, and hold out a hand of help to them [illegible] and as you meet to others, God will [illegible] you. Be humble and gentle in your conversation, but always pertinent when you speak: hearing out before you attempt to answer; and then speaking as if you would persuade, not impose. Affront none, neither revenge the affronts that are done to you: but forgive and you shall be forgiven of your Heavenly Father.---In making friends, consider well first; and when you are fixed, be true; nor wavering by reports, nor deserting in affliction: for that becomes not the good and virtuous. Watch against anger, neither speak nor act in it: for, like drunkenness, it makes a man a beast; and throws people into desperate inconveniencies. Avoid flatterers, for they are thieves in disguise; their praise is costly, designing to get by those they bespeak; they are the worst of creatures; they lye to flatter, and flatter to cheat:---and which is worse, if you believe them, you cheat yourselves most dangerously. But the virtuous, though poor, love, cherish, and prefer. Remember David, who asking the Lord "Who shall abide in thy taberna-"cle? Who shall dwell in thy holy hill?" answers, "He that "walketh uprightly, worketh righteousness, and speaketh the "truth in his heart: in whose eyes the vile person is con-"temned, but honoureth them who feareth the Lord." Next, my children, be temperate in all things: in your diet, for that is physick by prevention; it keeps, nay it makes people healthy, and their generation sound. This is exclusive of the spiritual advantage it brings. Be also plain in your apparel; keep out that lust, which reigns too much over some; let your virtues be your ornaments; remembering, life is more than food, and the body than raiment. Let your furniture be simple and cheap; avoid pride, avarice and luxury. Make your conversation with the most eminent for wisdom and piety; and shun all wicked men, as you hope for the blessing of God, and the comfort of your father's living and dying prayers. Be sure you speak no evil of any, no not of the meanest; much less of your superiors, as magistrates, guardians, tutors, teachers, and elders in Christ.

Be no busy bodies, meddle not with other folks matters, but when in conscience and duty prest: For it procures trouble, and is ill-manners, and very unseemly to wise men. In your families remember Abraham, Moses and Joshua, their integrity to the Lord, and do as you have them for your ex[illegible] the fair and service of the living God be encour[illegible] houses, and that plainness, sobriety, and moder[illegible] things as becometh God's chosen people: and, as [illegible] my beloved children, do you counsel yours, if Ge[illegible] you any. Yea, I counsel and command them as [illegible] that they love and serve the Lord God with an [illegible] that he may bless you and yours, from generation [illegible] And, as for you, who are like to be concerned in [illegible] of Pennsylvania, and my parts of East Jersey, esp[illegible] I do charge you, before the Lord God and his ho[illegible] you be lowley, diligent, and tender: fearing [illegible] people, and hating covetousness. Let justice hav[illegible] course, and the law free passage, though to your [illegible] man against it: for you are not above the law [illegible] above you. Live therefore the lives yourselves, y[illegible] the people live; and then you have right and bol[illegible] the transgressor.---Keep upon the SQUARE, for [illegible] therefore do your duty: and be sure you see with yo[illegible] and hear with your own ears.---Entertain no lur[illegible] no informers for gain or revenge:---use no tricks, [illegible] vices, to support or cover injustice: but let your [illegible] right before the Lord, trusting in him above the c[illegible] men, and none shall be able to hurt or supplant.

Oh the Lord is a strong God, and he can do wh[illegible] pleases: And though men consider it not, it is t[illegible] rules and over-rules in the kingdoms of men: A[illegible] up and pulls down. I, your father, and the man [illegible] he that trusts in the Lord, shall not be confounded. [illegible] in due time, will make his enemies be at peace with [illegible] you thus behave yourselves, and so become a ter[illegible]or to evil do[illegible] and a praise to them that do well, God, my God, will [illegible] you, in wisdom and a sound mind: And make you blessed instruments in his hand, for the settlement of some of those dea[illegible] late parts of the world,---which my soul desires above all wordly honours and riches; both for you that go, and you that stay; you that govern, and you who are governed: That in the end you may be gathered with me to the rest of God. Finally, my children, love one another with a true and endeared love, and your dear relations on both sides: And take care to preserve tender affection in your children to each other: Often marrying within themselves, so as it be without the bounds forbidden in God's law. That so they may not, like the forgetting and unnatural world, grow out of kindred and as cold as strangers; but as becomes a truly natural, and christian stock: You and yours after you may live in the pure and fervent love of God towards one another, as becometh brethren in the spiritual and natural relation. So my God, that has blessed me with his abundant mercies, both of this and the other and better life, be with you all; guide you by his counsel, bless you, and bring you to his eternal glory: That you may shine, my dear children, in the firmament of God's power, with the blessed spirits of the just; that celestial family, praising and admiring him the God and Father of it, for ever and ever. For there is no God like unto him, the God of Abraham, of Isaac, and of Jacob; the God of the Prophets, the Apostles, and martyrs of Jesus; in whom I live for ever.----So farewell to my thrice dearly beloved wife and children. Yours, as God pleaseth in that which no waters can quench, no time forget, nor distance wear away; but remains for ever. WILLIAM PENN.

ANECDOTE of the late General WADE.

THE late Marſhal Wade, it is well known, had too great an itch for gaming, and frequented places of all kinds where play was going forward, without being very nice as to the company meeting there; at one of which places one night, in the eagerneſs of his diverſion, he pulled out an exceeding valuable gold ſnuff box, richly ſet with diamonds, took a pinch, and paſſed it round, keeping the dice-box four or five mains before he was out, when recollecting ſomething of the circumſtance, and not perceiving the ſnuff-box, he ſwore vehemently that no man ſhould ſtir till it was produced, and a general ſearch ſhould enſue. On his right ſat a perſon dreſſed as an officer, though ſhabby, that now and then, with great humility, begged the honour to be permitted going a ſhilling with him, and had by that means picked up four or five; on him the ſuſpicion fell, and it was propoſed to ſearch him firſt, who deſiring to be heard, declared, "I know the Marſhal well, yet he, nor all the powers upon earth, ſhall ſubject me to a ſearch, whilſt I have life to oppoſe it. I declare, on the honour of a ſoldier, I know nothing of the ſnuff-box, and hope that will ſatisfy the man doubting: Follow me into the next room, where I will defend that honour or periſh!" The eyes of all were now turned on the Marſhal for an anſwer, who, clapping his hand eagerly down for his ſword, felt the ſnuff-box (ſuppoſed to have paſſed round, and clapped there from habit) in a ſecret ſide pocket of his breeches, made for that purpoſe. It is hardly to be conceived the confuſion that covered him on the occaſion, that he had ſo ſlightly given way to ſuſpicion; remorſe, mixed with compaſſion and tenderneſs for the wounded character (becauſe poor) his fellow ſoldier, attacked him at once ſo forcibly, that he could only ſay to him, on leaving the room immediately, Sir, I here, with great reaſon, aſk your pardon, and hope to find it granted, from your breakfaſting with me, and hereafter ranking me amongſt your friends." It may be eaſily ſuppoſed the invitation was complied with; when, after ſome converſation, the Marſhal conjured him to ſay what could be the true reaſon that he ſhould refuſe being ſearched. Why, Marſhal, (returned the officer, being upon half pay, and friendleſs, I am obliged to huſband every penny: I had that day very little appetite, and as I could not eat what I had paid for, nor afford to loſe it, the leg and wing of a fowl, with a manchit, were then wrapped up in a piece of paper in my pocket, the thought of which being found there, appeared ten times more terrible than fighting the room round." "Enough! my dear boy, you have ſaid enough! Your name! Let us dine at Sweet's to-morrow! We muſt prevent your being ſubjected again to ſuch a dilemma." They met next day, and the Marſhal preſented him a Captain's commiſſion, with a purſe of guineas, to enable him to join the regiment.

The following ſtory is taken from Madam D'AUNEY'S Letters, the authority of which was ſo much regarded by Mr. ADDISON, that he adopted from them the ſtory of Madam D'MAINTENON'S fortune having been foretold her by a bricklayer; and odd as it is, it is believed univerſally to have its foundation in truth.

A Lawyer's clerk was in love with an extream pretty girl, courted her, and agreed to marry her. The wedding entertainment was provided, and amongſt others the clerk's maſter was invited. In the heat of dancing, a ſigh, cauſed by indigeſtion, or windy food, eſcaped the bride the contrary way, and loud enough to be heard by the whole company, who burſt into a laughter: She bluſhed, and the bride-groom was ſo confounded and enraged, that he inſtantly broke off the match, to which no remonſtrances or treaties could reconcile him. He imagined his acquaintance would jeer him for ever upon this accident, and he left the houſe in a pet. Great was now the diſorder of the gueſts; the clerk's maſter, who was one of them, and, though a man in years had eyed the girl with great attention, and was ſmitten with her beauty, not only condemned his clerk's exceſſive delicacy, but propoſed to repair the injury he had done the girl, and offered her marriage on the ſpot. Piqued at her lover's deſertion, and preſſed by her friends, who foreſaw the advantage of ſuch a match, ſhe conſented, and they were married immediately. After marriage, ſhe behaved to him with ſo much modeſty and diſcretion, that dying ſoon after, he left her miſtreſs of a very opulent fortune. Being now a widow, handſome, young, and rich, ſhe had many offers of marriage, but accepted only of the Marſhal de L'Hopital's, governor of Paris; who alſo dying ſoon after, left her once more a widow, though with greater additions of honour than fortune. Her perſon and character were now ſo amiable, that Caſimir, king of Poland, reſiding in France after his abdication of the throne, fell in love with her, and married her. So great a fortune, never took its riſe from a FART.

PRITHEE, B----------, why affect Thus to treat, with ſuch neglect,
The harmleſs pleaſure of a kiſs, Pregnant with ſuch ſtore of bliſs?
Callous always will you prove To the pleaſing joys of love?
Know the ruthleſs hand of time Soon will rob you of your prime;
Soon will leave you unadorn'd;
Then, dear Nymph, in time be warn'd,
For, when wrinkled o'er with years, Oppreſs'd with age, worn out with cares,
You recollect your youthful days, Bleſt with affluance and eaſe,
When diſdainful you rejected Pleaſures ne'er by age expected, Believe, unpity'd you'll deplore
The loſs of joys you ſcorn'd before:
With ſighs and tears you'll then repent,
The precious moments now miſpent:
In vain you'll murmur and complain,
And ſigh for youth and love again.
Then be happy whilſt you may,
Youth will quickly glide away,
Beauty wither and decay,
Seize at once th' auſpicious hour, Kindly on your Poet ſhow'r,
Store of ſoft tranſporting bliſſes Melting, love inſpiring kiſſes, Softeſt, ſweeteſt, beſt of Miſſes.

dingly done.

her, Son, and Holy Ghoſt, three Per-I George Whitefield, clerk, at preſent houſe academy, in the province of Georbeing thro' infinite mercy in more than
, and a perfectly ſound and diſpoſing certainty of death, and yet the uncertainty called by it to my long wiſhed-for home, Will and Teſtament, in manner and form imus, in ſure and certain hope of a reſurſe, through our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, I commit h, to be buried in the moſt plain and decent wing in whom I have believed, and being per-ll keep that which I have committed unto him, ſurance of faith I commend my ſoul into the hands of the ever-loving, altogether lovely, never failing Jeſus, on whoſe complete and everlaſting righteouſneſs I entirely depend, for the juſtification of my perſon and acceptance of my poor, worthleſs, though, I truſt, ſincere performances, at that day when he ſhall come in the glory of his Father, his own glory, and the glory of his holy angels, to judge both the quick and the dead. In reſpect to my outward, American concerns, which I have engaged in ſimply and ſolely for his great name's ſake, I leave that building, commonly called the Orphan-Houſe, at Bethеſda, in the province of Georgia, together with all the other buildings lately erected thereon, and likewiſe all other buildings, lands, negroes, books, furniture, and every other thing whatſoever which I now ſtand poſſeſſed of in the province of Georgia aforeſaid, to that elect lady, that mother in Iſrael, that mirror of true and undefiled religion, the Right Honourable Selina, Counteſs Dowager of Huntingdon, deſiring that as ſoon as may be after my deceaſe, the plan of the intended Orphan-Houſe, Bethеſda College, may be proſecuted, or, if not practicable, or eligible, to purſue the preſent plan of the Orphan-Houſe academy, on its old foundation and uſual channel; but if her ladyſhip ſhould be called to enter into her glorious reſt before my deceaſe, I bequeath all the buildings, lands, negroes, and every thing before-mentioned, which I now ſtand poſſeſſed of in the province of Georgia aforeſaid, to my dear firſt fellow-traveller, and faithful, invariable friend, the Honourable James Habersham, Eſq; preſident of his Majeſty's honourable Council.
And ſhould he ſurvive her ladyſhip, I earneſtly recommend him, as the moſt proper perſon to ſucceed her ladyſhip, or to act for her during her ladyſhip's life-time, in the affairs of the Orphan-Houſe academy. With regard to my outward affairs in England; whereas there is a building commonly called the Tabernacle, ſet apart many years ago for divine worſhip, I give and bequeath my ſaid Tabernacle, with the adjacent houſe in which I uſually reſide, when in London, with the ſtable and coachhouſe, in the yard adjoining, together with all books, furniture, and every thing elſe whatſoever that ſhall be found in the houſe and premiſes aforeſaid, and alſo the building, commonly called Tottenham-Court Chapel, together with all the other buildings, houſes, ſtable, coach-houſe, and every thing elſe whatſoever which I ſtand poſſeſſed of in that part of the town, to my worthy, truſty, tried friends, Daniel Weſt, Eſq; in Church-ſtreet, Spital-fields, and Mr. Robert Keen, woollen-draper, in the Minories, or the longer ſurvivor of the two. As to the monies, which a kind Providence, eſpecially of late, in a moſt unexpected way, and unthought of means, hath vouchſafed to intruſt me with;
I give and bequeath the ſum of 100l. ſterling to the Right Honourable Counteſs Dowager of Huntingdon aforeſaid, humbly beſeeching her ladyſhip's acceptance of ſo ſmall a mite, as a ſmall grain of acknowledgment for the undeſerved, unſought-for honour her ladyſhip conferred upon me, in appointing me, though the leaſt of all, to be one of her ladyſhip's domeſtic chaplains. Item, I give and bequeath to my dearly beloved friend the Honourable James Habersham aforeſaid, my late wife's gold watch, and 10l. for mourning; to my dear old friend, Joſeph Harris, Eſq; of the city of Glouceſter, who received and boarded me in his houſe, when I was helpleſs and deſtitute, above thirty-five years ago, I give and bequeath the ſum of 50l.
To my humble faithful ſervant and friend, Mr. Ambroſe Wright, if in my ſervice or employ, either in England, America, or elſe-where, at the time of my deceaſe, I give and bequeath the ſum of 100l. To my brother, Mr. Richard Whitefield, I give and bequeath the ſum of 50l. To my brother, Mr. Thomas Whitefield, I give and bequeath the ſum of 50l. to be given him at the diſcretion of Mr. Robert Keen: To my brother-in-law, Mr.
James Smith, hoſier, in the city of Briſtol, I give and bequeath the ſum of 50l. and 30l. alſo for family mourning: To my niece, Mrs. Frances Hartford, of Bath, I give and bequeath the ſum of 50l. and 20l. for family mourning: To Mr. John Crane, now a faithful ſteward at the Orphan-Houſe academy, I give and bequeath the ſum of 40l. To Mr. Benjamin Stirk, as an acknowledgment of his paſt ſervices at Bethеſda, I give and bequeath the ſum of 10l. for mourning: To Peter Edwards, now at the Orphan-Houſe academy, I give and bequeath the ſum of 50l. To William Trigg, at the ſame place, I give and bequeath the ſum of 50l. both the ſums aforeſaid to be laid out, or laid up for them, at the diſcretion of Mr. Ambroſe Wright:
To Mr. Thomas Adams, of Redborough, in Glouceſterſhire, my only ſurviving firſt fellow-labourer, and beloved much in the Lord, I give and bequeath the ſum of 50l. To the Rev. Mr.
Howell Davis, of Pembrokeſhire, in South Wales, that good Soldier of Jeſus Chriſt; to Mr. Toriel Joſs, Mr. Cornelius Winter, and all my other dearly beloved preſent ſtated aſſiſtant preachers, at Tabernacle and Tottenham-Court chapels, I give and bequeath 10l. each for mourning: To the three brothers of Mr. Ambroſe Wright, and the Wife of his brother, Mr. Robert Wright, now faithfully and ſkilfully labouring, and ſerving at the Orphan-Houſe academy, I give and bequeath the ſum of 10l. each for mourning; To Mr. Richard Smith, now a diligent attendant on me, I give and bequeath the ſum of 50l.
and all my wearing apparel which I ſhall have with me in my journeying through America, or on my voyage to England, if it ſhould pleaſe an all-wiſe God to ſhorten my days in either of theſe ſituations. Finally, I give and bequeath the ſum of [illegible] to be diſtributed at the diſcretion of my executors, herein after mentioned, for mourning among my old London ſervants, [illegible] at Tottenham-Court Chapel, and the Tabernacle poor, eſpecially my old truſty, diſintereſted friend, and ſervant, Mrs. Elizabeth Wood. All the other reſidue, if there be any reſidue of monies, goods and chattels, or whatever property I may have [illegible] the ſale of my books, or any manuſcripts that I may leave behind, I give and bequeath to the Right Hon.
Counteſs Dowager of Huntingdon, or in caſe of her ladyſhip's [illegible] my departure, to the Hon. James [illegible]oned, after my funeral expences [illegible]wards paying off my arrears that [illegible]Orphan-Houſe academy, or for [illegible]eſt three orations that ſhall be [illegible]entioned in a paper annexed [illegible] appoint the Hon. James [illegible] executor in reſpect to my [illegible]d my truſty tried dearly [illegible]Daniel Weſt, Eſq; and Mr.
[illegible] laſt will and teſtament, [illegible]egging each to accept of [illegible]riſtian benefactors, and [illegible]moſt hearty thanks and [illegible]nd more convinced of [illegible]tance of the grand goſpel truths, which I have from time to time delivered; and am ſo far from repenting my delivering them in an itinerant way, that had I ſtrength equal to my inclination, I would preach them from pole to pole, not only becauſe I have found them to be the power of God to the ſalvation of my own ſoul, but becauſe I am as much aſſured that the Great Head of the Church hath called me by his word, providence and ſpirit, to act in this way, as that the ſun ſhines at noon-day. As for my enemies, and miſjudging miſtaken friends, I moſt freely and heartily forgive them, and can only add, that the laſt tremendous day will ſoon diſcover what I have been, what I am, and what I ſhall be, when time itſelf ſhall be no more; and therefore, from my in-moſt ſoul, I cloſe all, by crying, come Lord Jeſus, come quickly; even ſo Lord Jeſus, Amen and Amen. GEORGE WHITEFIELD.

This was written with the teſtator's own hand, and at his deſire, and in his preſence, ſealed, ſigned, and delivered, at the Orphan-Houſe academy, in the province of Georgia, before us witneſſes, anno Domini March the twenty-ſecond, One thouſand ſeven hundred and ſeventy.

N. B. I alſo leave a mourning ring to my honoured and dear friends and diſintereſted fellow-labourers, the Rev. Meſſrs. John and Charles Weſley, in token of my indiſſoluble union with them, in heart and chriſtian affection, notwithſtanding our difference in judgment about ſome particular points of doctrine. Grace be with all them, of whatever denomination, that love our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, our common Lord, in ſincerity and truth.

A true ANECDOTE of the late Mr. WHITEFIELD.

IN the early Part of his Life, this Gentleman was preaching in the open Fields, when a Drummer happened to be preſent, who was determined to interrupt his pious Buſineſs, and rudely beat his Drum in a violent Manner, in order to drown the Preacher's Voice. Mr. Whitefield ſpoke very loud, but was not ſo powerful as the Inſtrument: He therefore called out to the Drummer in theſe words: "Friend, you and I ſerve the two greateſt Maſters exiſting, but in different callings: You may beat up for Volunteers for King George; I for the Lord Jeſus Chriſt. In God's Name then dont let us interrupt each other; the World is wide enough for us both, and we may get Recruits in Abundance." This Speech had ſuch an Effect, that the Drummer went away in great good Humour, and left the Preacher in full Poſſeſſion of the Field.

To the PRINTER.

SIR,

WHEN we conſider the many different forms Vice aſſumes, in order to allure and inſnare mankind, and the natural propenſity of human nature to wickedneſs; we need not be ſurprized to ſee them often acting diametrically oppoſite to the dictates of Reaſon and Conſcience: and to meet with men, who purſue meaſures which they know to be inconſiſtent with their preſent and future happineſs.

Amidſt all the vices to which mankind are prone, none is ſo prophane, abſurd, and deteſtable, as the odious, yet faſhionable one of common ſwearing; a vice productive of no advantage, pleaſure or ſatisfaction; but the commiſſion of which will, at laſt, be attended with very fatal and melancholy conſequences. As moſt of the other frailties of human nature have a tendency either to indulge our ſenſual appetites, or to gratify private intereſt, ſome ſpecious, though fallacious arguments may be adduced to palliate their enormity. The Epicure, for example, dwells with rapture on the deſcription of a feaſt; the pride of life ſways the ambitious man; and the man of pleaſure tells us of nature, and the irreſiſtible charms of a fine woman: But what evaſion can the Swearer find for his preſumption and impiety? What excuſes can he uſe to extenuate his guilt? None, indeed: he neither receives pleaſure nor profit from the practice of this unnatural vice; on the contrary, the practice of it betrays in him a total depravation of manners and ſentiment.

Is the ſwearer believed ſooner for the multiplicity of oaths with which he confirms his aſſertions? Does he not rather, by this illiberal cuſtom, leſſen his reputation, and impeach his own character? for by taking ſuch pains to make himſelf believed, does he not give his hearers room to ſuſpect his veracity?

Theſe are reflections which, I ſhould imagine, would occur to every thinking man, and contribute to preſerve him from the infection of this prevalent diſtemper. But ſuch is the infatuation of mankind in general, that tho' they are thoroughly convinced of this folly, and conſcious of the heinouſneſs of this crime, yet, yielding to the violent impulſes of their paſſions, they plunge themſelves in the moſt ſhameful exceſſes, and practice, without ſhame or remorſe, crimes, at the mention of which even ſavages would ſtart with horror. And though we juſtly deſpiſe the abſurd notions of religion theſe barbarians profeſs, yet we ſhould do well to reflect, that they always pay the moſt profound veneration and reſpect to the name of their deity, (whether ſun or moon, animal or vegetable) and never ſpeak of him but with the moſt humiliating marks of veneration.

How much more, then, ought Chriſtians, whoſe minds are enlightened by the knowlege of the true Faith, to revere that ſacred Name, to whoſe beneficience they are indebted for all the comforts as well as neceſſaries of this life. Gratitude alone ought to incite them to pay an implicit obedience to his commands, by whom they were created and endued with the faculty of reaſon, which alone can render a perſon capable of enjoying life with any tolerable degree of pleaſure or ſatisfaction. Shall the tongue, which was certainly intended for wiſer and nobler purpoſes, be uſed to prophane and execrate the name of its Maker: No; let it rather be employed in offering praiſe and thankſgiving to HIM, whoſe almighty word ſpake the univerſe into being, and in whoſe hands are the iſſues of life and death.

But this vice ſeems to be peculiar to Chriſtians only; for we read of no Pagan nation, either antient or modern, in which the people were permitted to jeſt in ſuch a prophane manner with the name of their Deity. We learn, that among the athenians, it was a capital crime to treat the Deities with contempt or irreverence. And ſhall we then be excelled by thoſe very perſons, whoſe manners, cuſtoms, and religion we affect ſo much to deſpiſe. Let us, at leaſt, endeavour to vie with them in exterior marks of reſpect for the Deity; and let all our words and actions be as far ſuperior to theirs, as our pure and holy religion ſurpaſſes their barbarous rites and adolatrous ceremonies.

With what concern have I heard a man of birth and fortune, poſſeſſed of fine ſenſe, liberal, humane, generous, in ſhort, bleſt with all the other qualifications of the gentleman and the ſcholar, interlard his diſcourſe with a variety of unmeaning oaths and execrations; with concern, I ſay, becauſe the lower claſs of people, who are always humble imitators of the great, preſume, ſince this vice is ſo prevalent among their ſuperiors, it muſt certainly give them an air of importance, and add greater force and energy to their aſſertions; never reflecting, that the examples of birth and education cannot render vice reſpectable, however they may encourage it by their favour, or countenance it by their adoption.

FROM THE FRENCH OF BOILEAU.

HEAV'N keep my friends from drowning and from fires,
From ſmoaky chimnies, and deceitful liars,
From taxing ſtateſmen, who the poor diſtreſs,
From thoſe that wiſh to manacle the preſs:
Of all the plagues attending human life,
Defend me from that plague----a ſcolding wife.
